HOCKEY.

Last night Edmonton defeated Strathcona in the first hockey match in the Houstoun trophy series. The game was played on Thistle rink, Edmonton. A special train ran bringing over the south side team and a small following of enthusiastic supporters. A fair number turned out from Edmonton to see the game, but on account of the very cold weather partly, and partly because interest had somewhat abated since the Calgary-Brewing Cup series of games were completed, there was nothing like the attendance of the previous matches. Those that did attend, however, witnessed as good a game as has been played this season.

A very close game was expected, in fact many Edmonton supporters were a little dubious of the result because of the closeness of the last game and because Jory, the strong point which Strathcona forwards could not get around, was not playing. Strathcona also, had secured their old goal-keeper, Cochrane, and were in shape to put up a fast game.

On the start it looked as if the tide of victory was turning in favor of the visitors. They scored the first goal in a short time and followed it up by a quick second. Then the home team got down to good combination playing and did some of the best team work yet played this season. Before half time they had evened up with the visitors, the score standing then 2-2.

In the second half Edmonton added 3 more easy goals when the visitors made a good rush and scored two more goals in close succession. After that the home team got one more goal, before time, the score being 5-4 in favor of Edmonton.

Norman May, who played point on the home team, put up a splendid game. It was his first appearance on the regular team and he is quite equal to position. Obleough, who played goal for the visitors, stopped many good shots, especially in the early part of the game. The game throughout was fast and clean, but not so close as the previous one. Edmonton was decidedly too strong an aggregation for Strathcona last night.

The teams played:

Edmonton,	Strathcona,
G. Goodridge,	goal
N. May,	point
R. Robertson,	cover point
E. Sibbald,	rover
McLeod,	forwards
Bellamy,	Ritchie,
Greenwood,	Kent,

Referee, J. McLean, Strathcona.

Umpires, R. McIntyre, Strathcona, and R. Hoar, Edmonton.

The team winning two out of three games secures the Houstoun shield. The next match will be played at Strathcona Monday night next, and the third, should a third be required, at Edmonton on the Friday night following.

EAST STONY PLAIN.

A great deal of excitement exists on the Plain since the C. N. R. surveyors put in their appearance.

The local improvement district No. 46, held their annual meeting on Jan. 24th for the purpose of electing an overseer. Mr. Wilbourne was elected chairman and conducted the meeting according to the ordinance. Mr. S. C. Hagen, the overseer, for 1902, was called on to give an account of his work which he did in very clear and satisfactory way to all present, only every resident taxpayer in the district being present. Nominations were then called for overseer, S. C. Hagen and Geo. Lacey being the only candidates a poll was opened till 12 o'clock when Mr. S. C. Hagen was declared elected overseer for 1903.

One of our esteemed young men in the person of Mr. William McQuay has left our neighborhood and gone to Winnipeg on account of illness. We hope to soon hear of his recovery and his return.

Who said there was going to be a station on Mr. Deane's farm. He says it was the engineer for his track dinner, there. No doubt it will increase the value of his farm.

Our fine mild weather caught a cold last night when it dropped to 30 below.

Mr. Hagen and family have moved to the farm of the late Elmer Reed, which he purchased some time ago.

PRESIDENT HILL'S VIEWS

The interview of the Toronto World with President H. L. of the Great Northern railway, has been given very great prominence in the Canadian press. If Mr. Hill's object was to get his views before the Canadian public he has succeeded beyond his expectations. There seems also to be a great disposition to accept Mr. Hill's expressions of view as unquestionable authority. That Mr. Hill knows the railway question to a finish there is no doubt. But that his point of view is not that either of Canada or of the individual citizens of Canada there is as little doubt. Therefore instead of all that he has said being taken as gospel it should always be weighed in connection with his interest in saying it. He has made several important statements which challenge criticism.

1. Canada has practically two trans-continental lines.

2. Another railroad across Canada will not pay to-day.

3. The solution of the present difficulty is the development of existing lines.

4. The conditions usually attached to a railway subsidy make it a disadvantage instead of a benefit.

1. So far as can be seen with the naked eye Canada has only one trans-continental railway to-day. Although the Canadian Northern appears to be a trans-continental line, and may very well become one, it is very far from being one yet. However useful the Canadian Northern is now, or may be to a still greater degree, when the projects now in hand are completed; unless and until it becomes actually a trans-continental line it can never do for Canada what Canada needs for her full development. The Grand Trunk, against whose Pacific scheme President Hill was talking, has means of attracting the favorable attention of investors such as no other railway company in the world has. Until Canada has at least a second trans-continental railway it would be suicidal, insanity to do other than encourage to a reasonable degree the completion of such a railway by the company most certain to complete it if they undertake it.

2. Possibly another railway across Canada will not pay to-day. But the tickers at the stock exchanges are evidence that the existing line pays very well indeed. And with so much admittedly valuable territory to develop, that is the best evidence that another similar line would pay. But the evidence of traffic available found in the price of C. P. R. stock is like and tame compared with the evidence in the country traversed by the railway that it cannot handle the traffic developed along its own lines. How much less then could one line handle traffic developed in still other territory even if that traffic were developed by branches.

3. There must be more than one main line of railway crossing the Territories east and west in order to handle the traffic now rapidly developing. Then two or more main lines are necessary. It is better for the public that they should be under separate control rather than under single control. President Hill to the contrary notwithstanding. People are apt to agree with President Hill that there is not room in Western Canada for more than one trans-continental line because of the comparison which they make with the western part of the United States. But there is no proper comparison, between the two regions. The Rocky Mountain section of the U. S. is a largely desert while it is in the parallel portion of Canada that there is the largest forest area in the Dominion. A belt of good country 25 miles wide will support a railway. In no part of the distance from the Red River to the Rocky Mountains by way of the Saskatchewan valley is the fertile belt less than 100 miles wide. There is therefore room not for only one, or two, or three but for four parallel lines for at least a thousand miles of the distance across the continent.

4. President Hill's objections to paid railways have not been shared by either of the railway companies for whom he talked, although both see serious objections to aid being given the Grand Trunk scheme. It is inconceivable that the conditions attached to the C. P. R. subsidy have been any detriment to that company, and although conditions have been attached to the Canadian Northern subsidy that company is still doing very well. If Mr. Hill's objection to bonuses is that thereby the people secure control most people will say that if the control can be made effective better give the bonus and have control than take the road without bonus and have no control. The whole question of bonus turns on the measures of control which the people secure for what they pay.

NEW AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

A meeting was held in Vegreville school house on Monday, Jan. 12th, to take steps to organize an agricultural society in that locality. R. D. Woodie, was chairman and Dr. Goodwin secretary. Both are late of Edmonton. It was decided to organize under the name of the Vermilion Valley and Beaver lake agricultural society, with headquarters at Vegreville. Fifty names were sent to the department of agriculture at Regina with the petition for organization. It is confidently expected that the society will have a successful career, as it has a very large and progressive settlement from which to draw support.

The Wheat Blockade

Regina, Jan. 22.—There was an important conference yesterday on the transportation problem. Premier Haultain and Hon. G. H. V. Bulyea represented the Northwest government; Mr. W. Whyte, the C. P. R., W. Motherwell, M. Snow (Wolsley) and A. T. Hunter, (Regina) the Grain Growers' association. Mr. Walter Scott, M. P., was also present. The conference lasted three hours. Mr. Whyte stated that many additional engines and cars had been put on during the past season, and he was not quite satisfied with the reasons that more work had not been done. One reason was the badness of the water. However, arrangements had now been made for transportation of lumber and other material. The C. P. R. had not at first realized the situation, which had developed rapidly, but now they were fully alive to the conditions. The company was receiving three locomotives weekly and the supply would be continuous, while at Montreal it was building the largest locomotives and car works in America. As to last year's crop, it was shown at the conference, that to enable the farmers to get the crop into store or shipped before the roads broke up and seeding began, there must be moved 15,000,000 bushels before the 15th of March. Before that date there would be 3,000,000 storage at Fort William and 3,000,000 all rail to St. John, leaving 7,000,000 bushels which must go by Duluth, via the Soo or the G. N. R. Mr. Bulyea had just returned from St. Paul, and said that either railway was prepared to accept shipments and there was ample storage at Duluth. Mr. Whyte explained the objections the C. P. R. had to send that way, but admitted that in the present extraordinary state of affairs those reasons should not prevail. He had no authority to order shipments by that route, but would telegraph to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy that if the reply were not satisfactory, Hon. G. H. V. Bulyea and Mr. W. Motherwell should proceed to Montreal to urge the matter.

Opposed to Subsidies

Toronto, Jan. 24.—The World's Montreal correspondent quotes Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., as opposed to the G. T. P. Pacific subsidy. Sir Thomas says: "It is unfair to existing agencies in Northwest Canada that the government should subsidize the G. T. P. Pacific, or any other scheme of a similar import. There is an implied obligation on the part of the government not to impair the value of the vast investments of private capital in railroad lines handling the Northwest traffic of the Dominion of to-day. In effect the government is asked to become a competitor of those pioneer companies, which have struggled for years with an unprofitable venture. Now these investments have reached a stage where they can be realized upon, and a syndicate comes forward and requests the government to enter into partnership with them to divide the business developed by others, after many years of attention and risk of capital."

"In principle I am opposed to a policy of government subsidies. It is demoralizing, unbusinesslike. If the promoters of the G. T. P. Pacific desire to construct their line, it should be essentially a private investment. Of course, it will not be a profitable undertaking in the beginning, but will pay in time. It will open up the country and develop business, as have the competitors."

"There must be a limit to the policy of the use of government funds for the promotion of private enterprises. At the same time if the government grants aid to the G. T. P. Pacific, the C. P. R. will expect similar subsidies for the branch lines it has under construction, and in contemplation."

As To Indiscriminate Immigration
The Toronto Globe recently remarked:

Mr. Sifton's remarks at Regina, that population is essential to give increased value to our lands, is indisputable, but there should be the greatest care exercised as to the kind of people we should try to import. No effort ought to be made to bring in the unfortunates of central or eastern Europe, and if they come in numbers sufficient to create a menace to the country future, it may be necessary to throw fictitious obstacles in their way. In any case, they should not be encouraged to cluster together into racial settlements after they come here.

The Coal Duty

Toronto, Jan. 23.—The Globe correspondent at Ottawa hears on good authority that there is little prospect of the Canadian government imitating the action of the United States Congress and removing the duty on bituminous coal.

The rebate of duty by Congress is only temporary, and the opinion here seems to be that it would be inadvisable for Canada to take off its duty under the circumstances.

As to a reduction of duty, Congress has not fulfilled the conditions which under the Dominion tariff would enable Canada to lower the coal rate from 57 cents to 40 cents a ton.

REVILLON FRERES

Edmonton, - Alberta.

Edward VII. of Britain,
Emperor of India.

The following is a part of the published description of the ceremony at which on New Year's Day, Edward King of Great Britain and Ireland was proclaimed emperor of India:

Right and left of the viceregal throne were ranged, the vassals of the Indian Crown. From the Nizam, first in sovereignty, and the Maharana of Mewar, first in the legendary parade of his Rajput blood, down to chiefs from the wild mountains of the Hindu Kush and the forests of Burma. Further away the tiers of red cloth were full of minor Asiatic notables, placed among the European spectators throughout the lines of the arena. The jewelled splendour of these princely or distinguished figures reduces language to despair. They were robed in lustrous silks, brocades, and velvets of all shades of the prism, dancing with the flames of all the gems, with flowing crests, turbans of orange, green, blue, red, amethyst, violet, every intense or delicate tint that the most noble or daring colorist has ever imagined. They carried diamond aligettes, their breasts shone with jeweled embroidery and encrusted pearls. Greatest of these figures was that of the Nizam of Hyderabad, in his dark blue uniform, crossed by the pale-blue ribbon of the Star of India, his head covered by a yellow turban, the color of his dynasty. By his side the most gorgeous group was that composed of the Burmese chiefs, shot from head to foot in golden scales, with strange jewels pendant from their ears, and crowned with golden pagodas. For the gaudiest beauty of this wonderful scene, with its setting of radiant arches upon the open plain, under the azure sky of India, there has surely never been a parallel in history, nor an array of Imperial vassals to match the Oriental assemblage of these splendid feudatories.

Among over a hundred ruling chiefs one of the most interesting was the Nizam. The baby Prince of Bharatpur, whose martial ancestors once repulsed Lord Lake with bloody loss, sat with his mother in one of two gilded pavilions flanking the viceregal dais, arranged to receive the noble ladies summoned to the dais, among them one of the most royal and able feudatories of the empire, the Begum of Bhopal.

"All were here now, every one who came near within the official limits of India—namely the northwest entrance of the Straits of Malacca to Cape Comorin, and from Cape Comorin to Aden—governors and lieutenant-governors, commissioners and presumably also extraordinary agents, and residents, commissioners and consuls-general; chief justices and their learned brethren of the bench, bishops, territorial and bishops non-territorial, secretaries ordinary, chief, senior, private, and military, comptrollers, advocates general, archdeacons, and generals, inspectors general, remembrancers, directors. All the pomp and splendor of the empire, the church and the laity were there, and conspicuous among them all a strong, hard-eyed man with a young, blunt-cut face, with the sand of South Africa still ingrained in the creases of his sword handle—Lord Kitchener of those places, then one.

"And the English visitors almost lost and insignificant in the mass, betrayed themselves by their dress only less than by their complexion. Among them, too, were men of high interest; multi-colored many well known figures in their black. This bench has upon it three of the most useful soldiers in the late war; that below them is known in every capital of Europe.

"The governors-general of Goa and of Pondicherry sat apart, with enough, indeed, or them to think upon. The king had the chance, the other always had the empire. Supreme in their capacities of land, they still cherish the old-fashioned memories that always haunt about a might-have-been; it may be that in their hearts or hearts the recollection that all has been for the best. Whatever the faults of our administration in India, no imagination could recall from the results of a change it would be difficult to guess whether France or Portugal would be the more and which the less successful. Two elements of our greatness—representatives of two powers, of which one has been and the other is of world-wide importance—how are given high place and a place of honor when they come to the banquet of their very presence a guarantee of recognition, and if a successful perception of the first. It is likely that in India by the ancestors of both the one and the other is remembered they must be inclined to smile.

"All spectators approach their seats from the rear of the amphitheatre. A solitary exception has been made to the rule. When all the others have to go down in their places, a small band of men are given in about equal proportion of Europeans, Russians, and as well, it will be struck in years and some visibly bowed down under the weight, gray-haired and white-bearded, men up to the arena from the ceremonial entrance. They would have made such a show of military alignment and soldier-like precision of step as the intimates of age allow, but in many cases the attempt is beyond their power. Still the oldest and most firm limp and totter bravely on to the once familiar strains of the stirring military march. Many seem, indeed, to have resigned for the nonce their youthful elasticity of step. Of the Europeans, some are in plain mufti, some in uniforms long since discarded, and furnished and faded in the course of years, while several are wearing the uniforms of their civil and military employment. The natives clearly belong mainly to the humbler classes, for their long, flowing garments are plain and unadorned. But, more noticeably than in shining raiment, or in luster of gold and silver, these men are clothed in the glory of as splendid memories as the records of our empire can boast. They are military veterans, about 600 altogether, remnants of those slender isolated forces of stout-hearted Britons and loyal natives, who, 45 years ago, cut off for months from the outer world under the flaming sun of an Indian summer, in the stress of battle and the more deadly stress of pestilence, through physical hardships of every kind and more hardships of the soul, held India for the empire on the Ridge of Delhi, in the empire of Lucknow, and on many another bloody field, when the sudden tempest of revolt, though it proved to be as local and short-lived as a tropical tornado, seemed to shake the whole fabric of British power to the very foundations. One native veteran is reported to be over 100 years old. Another enlisted in 1856 and has been four times wounded. Colonel Mackenzie, a fine old soldier in the uniform of the Guides Corps, leads the European veterans. The rear of this battered column is brought up by a party of old withered Gurkhas in faded uniforms with rows of medals on their breasts, whose faltering steps are supported tenderly by young sturdy fellows of their regiment. For a time the kaleidoscopic groups of natives, whether princes in their robes of state proceeding to their seats, or their attendants, have to wait. The whole assemblage rose to salute that band of heroes, and many an eye was dimmed and there was a choke in many a throat as we gazed upon this pathetic remnant. But for them and such as them, humble lighters though they were, who, to borrow the terse and eloquent inscription on Henry Lawrence's grave at Lucknow, had just "tried to do their duty," where might be all the pageantry of today, where all the promise of a splendid future, which still lie before our Indian empire? Amongst all the abiding memories of this memorable fortnight, surely none will be deeper, none more stimulating than this vision conjured up in such surroundings out of the tragic but glorious past.
